JOB MARKET PAPER

- “The Effects of GLP-1 Medications on Household Food Demand” (with Joseph Balagtas)

Some of the first product-level evidence on how GLP-1 medications change household food demand. A GLP-1 survey inside the NielsenIQ Consumer Panel links each household's adoption to its grocery purchases; harmonized Nutrition Facts data attach calories and nutrients to every product. Matched staggered difference-in-differences estimates show that spending falls more than calories: households buy cheaper calories, not fewer. The basket shrinks but does not get healthier — fiber, fat, protein, and sodium all fall at adoption, while sugar does not. Status: In preparation.
